

Spring 3-12-2009

Liberal Education, Effective Practice, and Diversity

Armando Bengochea

George Kuh

Steve Stemler

Recommended Citation

Bengochea, Armando; Kuh, George; and Stemler, Steve, "Liberal Education, Effective Practice, and Diversity" (2009). Mosakowski Institute for Public Enterprise. Paper 5.
<http://commons.clarku.edu/mosakowskiinstitute/5>

This Conference Proceeding is brought to you for free and open access by the Academic Departments, Centers & Programs at Clark Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Mosakowski Institute for Public Enterprise by an authorized administrator of Clark Digital Commons. For more information, please contact celwell@clarku.edu.

Liberal Education, Effective Practice, and Diversity

Abstract

This session will be based on three presentations that focus on the relationship between liberal education, effective practice and diversity from different perspectives. George Kuh will present data indicating that the educational benefits of "high impact" learning experiences (such as experiential education and undergraduate research), which are significant for all students, are often greater for students from underserved and minority backgrounds than for their majority counterparts. Armando Bengochea will discuss the ways in which an emphasis on effective practice can enhance the educational experiences of students of color within a liberal arts curriculum. Steve Stemler will report on research showing that including practice-oriented criteria in assessments of student achievements and capabilities can assist colleges and universities in identifying and educating minority students with high potential to succeed both in college and beyond college.

Keywords

Liberal Education, Effective Practice, Diversity

Follow this and additional works at: <http://commons.clarku.edu/mosakowskiinstitute>

Part of the Higher Education and Teaching Commons, and the Liberal Studies Commons

Comments

Clark/AAC&U Conference on Liberal Education and Effective Practice

Liberal Education, Effective Practice, and Diversity

Armando Bengochea, George Kuh, and Steve Stemler

This session will be based on three presentations that focus on the relationship between liberal education, effective practice and diversity from different perspectives. George Kuh will present data indicating that the educational benefits of "high impact" learning experiences (such as experiential education and undergraduate research), which are significant for all students, are often greater for students from underserved and minority backgrounds than for their majority counterparts. Armando Bengochea will discuss the ways in which an emphasis on effective practice can enhance the educational experiences of students of color within a liberal arts curriculum. Steve Stemler will report on research showing that including practice-oriented criteria in assessments of student achievements and capabilities can assist colleges and universities in identifying and educating minority students with high potential to succeed both in college and beyond college.