Academic Dress — An Explanation

From the cap, gown, and hood it is possible to distinguish the institution from which the wearer was graduated, the field of learning in which his or her degree was earned, and the level of the degree — bachelor, master, or doctorate.

The distinguishing feature of the black mortarboard cap, standard at most colleges and universities in the United States, is the color of the tassel — black for the holder of bachelor's or master's degrees, gold for doctor's degrees and the governing officers of educational institutions.

The gown is normally black, although the chief officers of many universities wear colored gowns, and several institutions have authorized optional doctoral gowns which embody the institution's colors. The level of the degree held is indicated by the gown's cut. The bachelor's gown, which is relatively simple, may be recognized by its long, pointed sleeves. The master's gown is somewhat fuller and its sleeves, which reach nearly to the wearer's knees, are square at the ends. The gown for the doctor's degree is cut rather full, velvet panels reach down the front and around the neck, and the sleeves are bell-shaped and decorated with three horizontal velvet bars.

The hood is the most distinctive feature of academic attire in the United States. Originally used as a cowl, as a shoulder cape, and as a container in which to collect alms, it is now worn at the back, suspended from the shoulders. The length of the hood and the width of its velvet border indicate the level of the degree held. The length of the bachelor's hood is three feet and the velvet border is two inches; the hood for the master's degree is three and one-half feet long with a three-inch border; the doctor's hood is four feet long and the border is five inches wide. The inner lining of the hood is colored with the official color or colors of the institution conferring the degree, while the color of the border indicates the field of learning in which the degree was earned.

Members of the governing body of a college or university are entitled to wear doctor's gowns, although the hoods represent the degrees actually held by the wearers or prescribed for them by the institution. The chief marshal may wear an especially designed costume approved by the institution. Military uniforms and religious habits are also appropriate apparel at academic convocations.

Colors indicating Fields of Learning: Arts, Letters, and Humanities — White; Business Administration — Drab; Economics — Copper; Education — Light Blue; Engineering — Orange; Fine Arts — Brown; Law — Purple; Medicine — Green; Music — Pink; Philosophy — Dark Blue; Public Service — Peach; Science — Golden Yellow; Theology — Scarlet.

About Clark University

Clark is a private, liberal arts University which offers its over 2,000 graduate and undergraduate students the advantages of a large institution while maintaining a small-college atmosphere. Located in Worcester, Massachusetts, in the geographical center of New England, Clark's 40-acre campus is set in an urban residential environment.

Clark's Graduate School was opened in 1889. It is not only the oldest in the Northeast, but also the second oldest in the nation. In 1902, the University added a separate Undergraduate College for men, which became coeducational in 1942. In 1953 the University's service to the local community was reinforced and its scope broadened with the formation of an Evening College. By 1975 the College of Professional and Continuing Education had succeeded the evening program with expanded and improved course offerings, including new masters programs.

Built upon the work of scholar/teachers such as Robert H. Goddard, "father" of the Space Age, and Albert A. Michelson, America's first Nobel laureate, Clark's tradition of academic vitality and versatility continues today. As the smallest member of the select Association of American Universities, Clark features small classes; close relationships among students, faculty, and administration; strong interaction between graduate and undergraduate students; and opportunities for interdisciplinary and independent study. The University offers integrated B.A./M.A. and M.A./Ph.D. degree programs; a cooperative program with the nationally recognized Worcester Art Museum; and cross registration with ten other area institutions through the Worcester Consortium for Higher Education.
