HONORARY DEGREE RECIPIENTS

Hauwa Ibrahim is an international human rights and Shariah law attorney with more than 20 years of experience representing women and children condemned to death in Shariah courts. She is the founder of Aries Law Firm and author of Practicing Shariah Law: Seven Strategies for Achieving Justice in Shariah Courts. She has served as Envoy to the United Nations, on the International Bar Association's Council on Human Rights, and on Nigeria's Presidential Panel to Review Compliance of the Armed Forces with Human Rights Obligations and Rules of Engagement. Ibrahim has appeared before the United States Senate and House of Representatives. She also has served as a visiting lecturer at Harvard Divinity School; a visiting professor at the University of Rome, Italy; and a senior fellow at the Majlis El-Hassan in the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan. Susan Hanson, an urban geographer with interests in gender and economy, transportation, local labor markets, and sustainability, is a distinguished university professor emerita in the Graduate School of Geography at Clark University. Her research has examined the relationship between the urban built environment and people's everyday mobility within cities, including questions of access to opportunity and how gender affects access. Hanson is among a small number of Clark faculty elected to both the National Academy of Sciences and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. She is past-president of the American Association of Geographers (AAG) and the recipient of both lifetime achievement honors and the Brunn award for creativity from the AAG. Among many other awards, Hanson was a fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Social and Behavioral Sciences at Stanford University, a Guggenheim Fellow, and a recipient of the Van Cleef Medal from the American Geographical Society. She serves on multiple boards of the National Research Council and is the author of eight books and many important research articles.

Christine Ortiz is the Morris Cohen Professor of Materials Science and Engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT). She also is founder and CEO of Station1, a new university focused on inquiry-based learning in science and technology for students from underrepresented backgrounds. Station1's model is based on inclusion and equity, learning through frontier project-based inquiry and research, and the integration of science and technology with societal perspective and impact. From 2010–2016, Ortiz served as dean of graduate education at MIT; she focused on creating pathways for women and students of color to advance in graduate and research careers in science and engineering. She is a member of the American Chemical Society, American Physical Society, Materials Research Society, American Association for the Advancement of Science, Society of Hispanic Professional Engineers, American Society of Engineering Education, and American Society of Mechanical Engineers. She is author and co-author of more than 170 peer publications, including publications in Science, Nature, and other top-ranked journals.

COMMENCEMENT NOTES

Clark University was founded in 1887 as the first all-graduate institution in America; the undergraduate college was established in 1902. During the early years of the University, graduate degrees were awarded on an individual basis. Formal commencement exercises began at Clark in June 1905, when bachelor's degrees were awarded for the first time.

From the cap, gown, and hood, it is possible to distinguish the institution from which the wearer graduated, the field of learning in which his or her degree was earned, and the level of degree: bachelor's, master's, or doctoral.

The distinguishing feature of the black mortarboard cap, standard at most colleges and universities in the United States, is the color of the tassel—black for the holder of bachelor's or master's degrees, gold for doctoral degrees and the governing officers of educational institutions.

The gown is normally black, although the chief officers of many universities wear colored gowns, and several institutions have authorized optional doctoral gowns that embody the institution's colors. The level of degree is indicated by the gown's cut. The bachelor's gown, which is relatively simple, has long pointed sleeves. The master's gown is somewhat fuller, and its sleeves, which reach nearly to the wearer's knees, are squared at the ends. The gown for the doctoral degree is cut rather fully. It has velvet panels down the front and around the neck, and bell-shaped sleeves decorated with three horizontal velvet bars.

The hood is the most distinctive feature of academic attire in the United States. Originally used as a cowl, as a shoulder cape, and as a container in which to collect alms, the hood is now worn at the back, suspended from the shoulders. The length of the hood and width of the velvet border indicate the level of the degree held. The length of the bachelor's hood is four feet long, and the border is five inches wide. The hood is lined with the official color or colors of the institution conferring the degree, and the color of the border indicates the field of learning in which the degree is earned.

The gown worn by doctoral candidates was designed and first worn in 1991 to commemorate the one-hundredth anniversary of the awarding of the first Ph.D. at Clark. The robes are emerald green with gold University seals on the lapels. These complement the traditional doctoral hoods, which reflect the University's official colors: white and emerald.

The gold cord worn by students receiving their degrees through the Undergraduate College signifies graduation with honors.

The flags of many nations, and the United Nations, line the walkway of the processional at today's Commencement. These flags represent the homelands of undergraduate and graduate degree recipients. With students from 83 countries in attendance at Clark and members of the faculty involved in research, training and development around the world, Clark's international character is evident and is honored today with this display.
